Thanksgivukkah: Saying 'shalom' to hybrid holiday

Holiday fusion. Boston's Jewish community is set to celebrate the first day of Hanukkah on Thanksgiving Day.

On Thursday, two highly celebrated holidays will collide to create a once-in-a-lifetime celebration of gratitude, community, family and tolerance. The day has been dubbed "Thanksgivukkah."

For the first time since 1888, the first day of Hanukkah will fall on Nov. 28 — which is also Thanksgiving. But marking your calendar for the next supersized holiday may prove pointless, as physicist Jonathan Mizrahi estimates that the next one won't happen for another 70,000 years — in the year 79,811.

Thanksgiving is celebrated on the fourth Thursday of each November and is tracked by the Gregorian calendar, while Hanukkah, which is governed by the Hebrew calendar, varies in relation to other holidays, but tends to kick off in December.

According to Jeff Levy, director of JewishBoston.com at Combined Jewish Philanthropies, the fusing of the two holidays may not only mean double the fun, but double the stress.

"People are wondering when they should light the menorah, when to exchange gifts and what to cook. It also raises the question about what happens if one side of a family isn't Jewish," said Levy, who launched ThanksgivukkahBoston.com to raise awareness about the unique holiday.

Thanksgivukkah dishes

Boston-area chefs/restaurant owners Marjorie Druker (The Modern Rotisserie and New England Soup Factory) and Michael Leviton (Lumiere, Area Four and A4 Pizza) have developed Thanksgivukkah recipes based on their experience in Jewish cuisine and comfort food.

- Their inspired dishes include: Pumpkin Custard Kugel, Challah, Apple and Cornbread Stuffing, Turkey and Root Vegetable Soup with Sage Scented Matzo Balls and Stuffing Tots.
- Visit Metro.us/Boston to get the full recipes.

Last week, Mayor Thomas Menino officially declared Nov. 28 "Thanksgivukkah" in the city of Boston.

The proclamation came after JewishBoston.com interviewed residents, along with Menino, about the unique holiday.

"What it says to me is that we're a strong community, we understand there is diversity and respect each others' religion and customs. And that, to me, is just so important," Menino told the website.

CJP President Barry Shrage pointed to the similarities between the two holidays.

"The reason these are actually in many ways the same holiday is that what they're really both about is resistance to religious oppression. The pilgrims left England because they felt that [King] James was an oppressor. ... And that's the same story as the story of Hanukkah," he said.

Jamie Stolper, co-creator and president of ShalomBoston.com, believes that the excitement surrounding the holiday shows the integration of Jewish and American culture.

"It's a sign that Jews have really found a home in America, that they are comfortable here and can observe and enjoy both Jewish and American customs and rituals," said Stolper, whose website also offers tips on how the holidays can coexist.

"I think the message of both holidays is similar: gratitude. Gratitude for what Americans and Jews have overcome in their histories, and that is tyranny against freedom."

Fire sparks discovery of marijuana grow house

Police are investigating a large marijuana growing operation that was found inside a Roxbury home after fire crews responded there to put out a fire on Friday. The apparent large, illegal operation included 176 marijuana plants.

Fire crews responding to reports of a fire at 10 Wyoming St. found flames shooting from the home at about 11 p.m.

While on the scene, fire crews discovered numerous amounts of drug paraphernalia throughout the house and eventually discovered the plants in the basement and second floor, police said.

The fire caused an estimated $500,000 in damage.

The two-alarm fire was so intense that commanders ordered firefighters out of the building. One firefighter was injured when he had to jump from the roof to a second-floor porch. He was taken to a hospital for a leg injury. Another firefighter was treated for debris in an eye.

Authorities said the home was unoccupied at the time of the fire. One apartment was undergoing renovations and the other was unoccupied.

WHAT TO WATCH OUT FOR ON BLACK FRIDAY

Black Friday is coming up, and the sales always look good. Is there anything I should watch out for?

It's easy to lose your good shopping habits in the commotion of Black Friday shopping. First of all, make sure you fully understand retailers' sale policies with regard to returns, refunds, layaway and price-matching before you make your purchases.

With advertisements highlighting sale prices, make sure to bring these ads with you to the store, especially if there is something you want at a specific price. Always check the advertised price against the price on the shelf and the register.

Keep all your receipts, especially if you are using a layaway plan. And above all, don't rush into a purchase. Take your time, as you'll still have weeks to buy your Christmas presents. Print out a copy of our Black Friday Shopper's Guide on our website at Mass.gov/ocabr.

I run a local retail location and I would like to be sure I'm accommodating persons who are blind or have low vision appropriately. What can my staff do to help improve the shopping experience of these consumers?

The best single thing that a retailer can provide for persons with disabilities is courteous personal help.

We are all consumers with some common needs, but some shoppers with disabilities may need some extra help in certain circumstances.

Pay special care to be thoughtful and ask the shopper how you can assist them. A person who is visually impaired may ask that you offer your arm and lead them, or scan an item for its price. Someone who uses a wheelchair may ask that you pick an item off of a high shelf for them. These are just some small gestures that make a big difference.

Each month, Undersecretary of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation Barbara Anthony will answer Metro readers' questions. Email consumer.communications@state.ma.us with "Ask the Undersecretary" in the subject.

Breakthrough deal curbs Iran's nuclear activity

Not so fast. Kerry said the deal was only a start.

Iran and six world powers clinched a deal on Sunday curbing the Iranian nuclear program in exchange for initial sanctions relief, signaling the start of a game-changing rapprochement that would reduce the risk of a wider Middle East war.

Aimed at easing a long festering standoff, the interim pact between Iran and the United States, France, Germany, Britain, China and Russia won the critical endorsement of Iranian clerical Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei.

But Israel, Iran's arch-enemy and a United States ally, denounced the agreement as an "historic mistake."

Critics in the U.S. Congress were quick to voice concern, with some raising the specter of failure to rein in North Korea on its nuclear programs, but they signaled that Congress would likely give the deal a chance to work. The agreement, which halts Iran's most sensitive nuclear activity — higher-grade enrichment of uranium — was tailored as a package of confidence-building steps toward reducing decades of tension and ultimately creating a more stable Middle East. Kerry: US has eyes 'wide open' to risks on Iran deal

The Obama administration insisted on strong safeguards in a nuclear deal with Iran and has no illusions about the risks that the Islamic state might not follow through on its obligations, Secretary of State John Kerry said on Sunday.

Kerry sought to reassure skeptics in the Congress who worry that the six-month agreement gives Iran too much leeway and that it might end up using it as a stalling tactic.

Kerry told CNN that U.S. officials entered into the deal with their eyes "absolutely wide open."

"We have no illusions. We don't do this on the basis of somebody's statements to you. We do it on the basis on actions that can be verified," he said.

GOP senator cites concerns on Iran deal

Influential Republican Sen. Bob Corker said on Sunday he had concerns about the interim nuclear deal with Iran and promised to hold the Obama administration's "feet to the fire" to ensure that Tehran is not allowed excessive leeway.

Corker, the ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that the pact must not "become the norm" for a longer-term agreement with Iran.

Deadly storm threatens US holiday travel plans

Bad timing. The Thanksgiving weekend is one of the most heavily traveled in the U.S.

A dangerous storm that brought snow and rain to the southwestern United States blamed for several road deaths is threatening Thanksgiving travel for millions of people in East Coast states, forecasters said.

The storm is expected to bring heavy rain to the Southeast on Tuesday and then turn north and move up the shore, possibly disrupting travel through Wednesday, according to the meteorologists at AccuWeather.com.

"If the storm hugs the coast and develops to its full potential, it could be a flight nightmare, not only for travelers in the East, but also throughout the nation," AccuWeather.com's Evan Myers said.

The rain and snow have already been linked to several deaths. It has stranded motorists and caused traffic accidents in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada and Texas.

Three people were killed in a multi-vehicle crash Friday in icy conditions on Interstate 40 west of Amarillo, Texas, a patrol dispatcher said. REUTERS

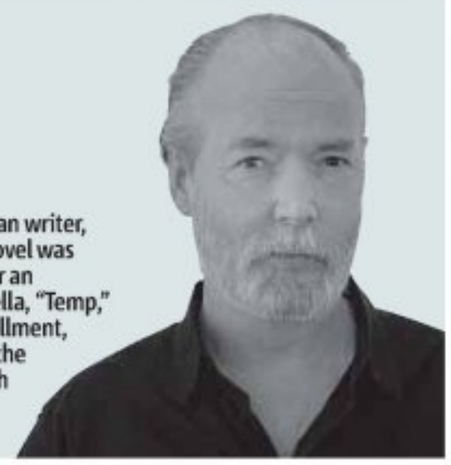
Day 16: Temp gets fired!

Here's the thing: I've been fired before and couldn't have cared less, but getting fired from TWK stung.

Metro exclusive

DOUGLAS COUPLAND



Douglas Coupland is a Canadian writer, artist and designer. His first novel was 1991's "Generation X: Tales for an Accelerated Culture." His novella, "Temp," of which this is the ninth installment, will be running online and in the pages of your daily Metro each weekday through Nov. 29.

"You let yourself get attached, Shanny," said my sister, Amy. "The No. 1 law of temping: Never bond."

She was helping me self-medicate with grape popsicles and a Kate Winslet DVD marathon.

I was in pajamas at 4. in the afternoon and my life had devolved into the third panel of a "Cathy" cartoon where she stares into the void and emotionally implodes.

"The only reason anyone hires anyone is to help them make money. The moment you can't do that, they'll chew your face off and toss the remains into a dumpster."

"That's not true. I liked it at TWK."

"Have you tried calling Mr. Shoeman?"

"He's on an energy retreat in the countryside."

"China has a countryside?"

"You're right. He's probably at World Extreme Cageboxing."

"What about Kyle?"

"He showed up to take Sarah to lunch just as I was leaving. I couldn't talk to him. God only knows what Sarah told him about me."

"Shannon, how do you think Kate Winslet manages to always lose weight?" Amy's attention span is limited.

Discussion of my temping was over.

The doorbell rang. I live in a basement suite and it's not the easiest place to find, so for someone to locate me takes work. I opened the door: It was Sarah No. 1, so I closed the door, but she started banging on it.

"Let me in! Shannon, I was horrible! I deserve this! Let me explain!"

I opened the door. "Explain what?"

"I just got fired."

"So what? I'm waiting for whatever it is you're going to explain."

"Let me come in?"

"Oh God. All right. Shoes off. Would you like a grape popsicle?"

She came into the TV area and I introduced her to Amy. "We're having a Kate Winslet marathon." Amy hit pause.

Sarah looked at the frozen frame. "How does that woman always manage to lose weight so regularly?"

"Excuse me, Sarah — my explanation?"

"There is no explanation. I came here because I couldn't think of anyone else to visit. I have no friends. They all got married and this would just make them happy about their decision to do so."

"So you came to me because I'm a failure and won't judge you harshly?"

"To be honest, sort of. Yeah. You seem like your head's screwed on right. I like the way you never took crap from anyone at TWK — and your 'random fact of the day' was always funny. And yesterday I got to see the human side of you."

"I'm deeply flattered." The three of us sat there in silence and then I figured it out: "Wait — you just want to know what my secret plan is so that you can get in on it."

"Well, yeah!"

I paused a second. "OK."

1 Dr. Conrad Murray on Jackson's final days

There are a few things I try not to write about as they are just too depressing — what is happening with Charlie Sheen's young twins with ex-wife Brooke Mueller is one, Michael Jackson's last days are another. But the Daily Mail's interview with Jackson's doctor, Dr. Conrad Murray, who was just released from prison, is too telling not to mention.

In the interview, Conrad claims the two were super close, for a very sad reason. "You want to know how close we were? I held his penis every night to fit a catheter because he was incontinent at night. ... He wore dark trousers all the time because after he went to the toilet he would drip for hours."

Murray says that toward the end of his life, Jackson "lived in a state of paranoia and filth" and was so worried that even the housekeeping staff was out to get him that he wouldn't let his clothing (even his underwear) be laundered for fear they would sell it.

See? Sad and depressing. At least I warned you.

From Australia's "We Can Be Heroes" and "Summer Heights High," your BFF (best fictional frenemy) gets her own spinoff in HBO's "Ja'mie: Private School Girl." As she'd say: That's, like, so random.

JA'MIE KING IS BACK

BEN TIMONY

What does the new series have in store for Ja'mie?
So Ja'mie's always been a private school girl, and in "Summer Heights High" she did a term away — but in this one is just back to her. It's her last three months of school, she's the school captain, she's on top of the world and bossier than ever. It's sort of put together like a reality show, like she is Kim Kardashian or something. ... It's all about her school life and family life. And so it sets up in the first episode that it's about her downfall.

If she's on the top of the world, does that mean she learned nothing from her visit to public school?
Yeah, she never learns anything, she's just all about herself. [Laughs] You kind of get the impression at the end of "Summer Heights High" that it's done nothing; she's still glad she is a private school girl.

Why is she the subject of your first solo show?
I really like her. It's hard, because [my characters] are all my favorites. I wanted to do a show about one character, and so it was more like she fit into that idea because she's been in two other shows, and I'd sort of already set up all of these things about her world. ... I like to write about all of them, but I was having a moment where I just wanted to write about her.

This time, HBO is airing your show in the U.S. right after it airs in Australia.
It's really good that they're doing that. These days it's one world with all the technology, so, yeah, it was always a disappointment that six months later American people got to see the show. Now it's only about three weeks after Australia. And they are giving it a great time slot on Sunday nights [at 10:30] and HBO is really excited about this one.

Does it also help reduce online piracy?
I think I'm supposed to care about that, but I just can't. When you make a show, you just want people to see it. ... I shouldn't be promoting pirating. [Laughs] I would probably be rich if pirating didn't exist, but, yeah, as long as people see it.

Q&A

Write what you know

What was your own high school experience like?
[Laughs] Well, my school was actually a private school, so it was very much like Ja'mie's. And I think I always craved going to a public school. I kind of wanted that more "real" experience. So maybe I'm still trying to deal with that thing with the theme of the show. ... But I certainly went to school with a few Ja'mies. [She's] so racist and homophobic and really manipulative and nasty and selfish. But at the same time, she's really appealing and you can kind of imagine that she'd be popular. She's fun, she comes up with lots of cool ideas, she's pretty adventurous, she does brave things. And, yeah, I think back in the day I probably would have wanted to be friends with her — which is a strange thought.

Get to know your superheroes

Earlier this month, Netflix announced that it will be developing four new series based on iconic yet lesser-known characters from Marvel's repertoire of superheroes. Daredevil, Jessica Jones, Iron Fist and Luke Cage series will begin streaming on the site in 2015. The four also will be featured in a Netflix-exclusive miniseries called "The Defenders," which is about a team of unlikely heroes who are willing to sacrifice themselves for the greater good. Here's what you need to know about these four superheroes:

Daredevil

Why him?

The New York City lawyer lost his sight when a radioactive substance fell on him. Now, he goes around fighting crime utilizing his super-natural radar abilities, proving justice is truly blind.

Best part of the comic

When Frank Miller took his turn at penning the crusades of the blind hero, he contrib-uted most of the iconic parts of the series. We learned that Daredevil was trained by a ninja clan, but it didn't bode well for him that he fell in love with a ninja assassin who was trained by a rival ninja clan. "Cabin in the Woods" co-writer Drew Goddard is now behind the series. Also, let's pretend that the dreaded 2003 Ben Affleck version of this superhero's story never happened.

Luke Cage

Why him?

Due to illegal prison experi-ments that were done to Luke Cage when he was wrongly convicted, he's got superhu-man strength, unbeatable stamina and skin so thick that it's nearly impossible to hurt him. This black superhero was rumored to get his own film, but it seems like Marvel will be testing out his popular-ity through the Netflix model.

Best part of the comic

Cage is an entrepreneur and is known for start-ing the "Heroes for Hire" business, where you can pay a fee to have a superhero solve your problems. He knows how to be a team player and has worked with Iron Fist, Daredevil and Jessica Jones (more on them later). He was also a member of the New Avengers and led the Heroic Age Thunderbolts.

Jessica Jones

Why her?

A freak accident with radioactive chemicals killed her family while she was in high school, but also left her with limited flight, invulnerability powers and super strength.

Best part of the comic

She's gone by several names including Jewel, Knightress and Power Woman, but she's best when she's working as an investigative journalist or detective. Oh yeah, she's also Luke Cage's leading lady. Melissa Rosenberg, who wrote the "Twilight" films, is writing this one.

MICHELLE CASTILLO
michelle.castillo@metro.lu

Iron Fist

Why him?

Through his martial arts studies, he was able to obtain dragon Shou-Lao's superhuman energy. This gave him strength, speed, stamina, durability, agility reflexes and senses — plus ninja sensibilities. He's mas-tered his chi, so he can heal himself or others and has limited telepathic abilities.

Best part of the comic

The martial arts hero has been able to defeat many opponents, including Sabretooth, Master Khan, the Steel Serpent and death itself. Part of his motivation comes from the fact that his parents gave up their lives to save his as they searched for the city of K'un L'un, which is inhabited by aliens from another dimension.

KEEP THE PEACE AROUND THE TABLE ON THANKSGIVING

No family is picture-perfect. / COMSTOCK IMAGES

Does the term "happy holidays" seem like an oxymoron to you? Hanging out with family can really make us nuts: We may revert to immature behavior, dig up old resentments and bottle up emotions until we lose it.

But these issues can actually be a good thing: They create an opportunity for change. This Thanksgiving, don't let your family dynamic get you down. Instead, follow these simple tips for keeping the peace around the dinner table.

Mirroring

Is there a family member that gets under your skin? Someone who riles you up with his or her mere presence? The truth is, the feeling that person ignites in you is a reflection of the way you feel about yourself. Don't point the finger at Uncle Steve, because he's not at fault. Rather, he is simply reflecting the way you feel about yourself. He is the mirror.

If you feel insecure about yourself, insecurity will be reflected back at you. If you don't believe in yourself, neither will anyone else. However, if you feel good about yourself, others will feel good about you.

Each time you experience a strong adverse reaction to someone, ask yourself the following questions: What is this person's behavior making me feel, and how is that related to the way I feel about myself.

Zen in the City

Be patient

Minding the gap

In this case, minding the gap is all about breaking old patterns. Instead of flipping out when someone upsets you, stop and witness the feeling that comes up. Then hang out with that feeling for 90 seconds. Feeling instead of reacting creates a gap, which serves as a form of healing. Feeling your unfelt pain is actually a big release. From there, you can process your old issues — and then, they can dissolve and heal. Still want to scream after 90 seconds? Try focusing on something good about the person you're upset with. It can help you think your way into a more positive place.

Use the F-word

That word is forgiveness. Holding onto resentment harms you — resentment keeps you stuck in the past and negatively affects your state of mind. Feelings of anger weaken your thoughts, your energy and your well-being. By choosing to forgive, you release negativity and clear space for happiness. If you're having trouble forgiving someone, examine the role you've played in the drama and take ownership of your behavior. This will help you release the other person.

But if something's totally uncalled for — like that nagging auntie who pesters you about getting married — it's important to recognize that when you carry the resentment, you make the situation worse. When you forgive someone, you're actually setting yourself free. Go into the forgiveness practice with the mindset that you're putting yourself first.

That couch cushion of yours may not be such a safe place to sit. Eighty to 90 percent of upholstered couches with polyurethane foam sold in the U.S. over the past 37 years contain chemical flame-retardants, say the filmmakers of HBO's new documentary "Toxic Hot Seat." The scary ingredients are linked to cancer, reproduction abnormalities and lowered intelligence in kids. According to the movie, everyday flame-retardant chemicals have damaged more people than they've saved — especially firefighters who work among the chemicals when they are burning and highly volatile.

Tony Stefani, a retired San Francisco Fire Department captain and founder of the San Francisco Firefighters Cancer Prevention Foundation, spoke to Metro about his diagnosis with kidney cancer. He says cancers among his colleagues are all too common.

"Soon it seemed like we were going to firefighters' funerals every other month," he says.

The greatest irony is that these flame retardants are proven not to reduce fatalities. The initial testing of their effectiveness was "dubious at best," says Stefani. "The test in the documentary shows that the flame retardant-treated foam is flammable."

Dr. Sarah Janssen of San Francisco Physicians for Social Responsibility agrees. "There is no real life-saving benefit," she says. "There are hundreds of these chemicals used and only a small fraction have been shown to be safe. The most worrying is the effect on children's IQ, which is very similar to lead exposure. It's done much damage."

Stefani worries about the long-term effects.

"You can replace your couch, but what happens then? The chemicals don't go away. They're still out there, and these chemical companies are producing tons more each day." LINDA CLARKE

Quoted

"Don't eat on the couch. ... Wet-mop and wet-dust, otherwise you're just whisking up toxic dust."

Dr. Sarah Janssen, San Francisco Physicians for Social Responsibility

Sniffle. Learn how to manage germs and keep colds away at the office

You can hear it in the chorus of "achoos" coming from the cubicle next door: The fall colds are in full Kleenex-piled swing. Heading into the travel mayhem, cocktail parties and meals around the table mean germs are riding coach — and following you back to the office.

Not having decomposing food next to your keyboard is a pretty low bar to set, so we asked Kelly Arehart, who manages the Healthy Workplace Project at Kimberly-Clark analyzing and advising offices all over the world, how to keep germs at bay.

Arehart likes to start with the basics: No matter how much you play the blame game with friends and family, "cold and flu are not discriminatory," she says. "Anybody can pick it up throughout their day." Getting sick is as simple as touching an elevator button or a door handle — things you have to do, you know, to enter your office — so the key is to make sure you have a system in place. Arehart suggests making hand-washing part of the arrival routine, before you even get to your desk.

And speaking of that petri dish of bacteria you like to call a desk — according to Arehart, desks are a commonly overlooked hotbed for germs. "[People] understand they should wash hands, but they miss that surfaces are a risk, a hot spot," she says.

Colds and flu spread easily in offices, subway cars and classrooms because people are sharing space. Part of sharing that space is knowing when you would do better to take the day off and stay home, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention guidelines (and Arehart) advise. In a recent survey conducted by Kimberly-Clark, they found that 59 percent of people went to work sick, and 30 percent felt they could not miss work.

Overall, one of the easiest ways to fight the sniffles — especially with the travel slog of the holidays — is to keep your grimy hands away from your face. Getting sick can start with that one little eye rub, so do as your teachers taught you and keep your hands (and your colds) to yourself. JULIA FURLAN

Ever wonder about the staying power of majors? Ben Schmidt, an assistant professor of history at Northeastern University, compiled data on the trends of majors over the past several decades. Engineering holds steady as business and life sciences degrees have shot upward in popularity. The humanities haven't fared as well — English, education and literature are on the decline.

Dr. Paul Harrington, director of the center for labor markets and policy at Drexel University, says although some areas like engineering and nursing are stronger than ever, planning is key. "It doesn't mean not to major in English — it means organize your extracurricular activities. If you're interested in writing, get on the student newspaper," he says.

When selecting a major, he suggests students ask themselves, "What am I good at? Can I live the kind of life I'd like to enjoy if I go into this field?"

If they focus on the latter, several majors get the most bang for their buck: engineering, math, biology, English and others, according to Salary.com.

Dr. Keith Sheppard, professor and associate dean of engineering and science at Stevens Institute of Technology, confirms the hot job prospects. "Graduates were able to get jobs even during the worst of the recent recession, and almost all of the graduating class of 2013 has found employment or is [entering] graduate education by the end of the summer," he says.

A reversal of political roles

Re: 'If Kennedy lived? Experts discuss the person he'd be today' (Metro, Nov. 22-24) Kieron Monks' article claims that Southern Republicans were blocking JFK's civil rights agenda in the early 1960s. Doesn't Mr. Monks know that the roadblocks were created by Southern Democrats, who wrote the Southern Manifesto in the 1950s and that there were basically no Republicans in the South in the 1960s — at least holding office? The odious Bull Connor, police chief of Birmingham, Ala., was not only a Democrat, but a state committeeman for the party. If you're going to write about history, at least get the facts straight. DEAN VIGLIANO, VIA EMAIL

I would like to thank Metro for answering one of my biggest questions of all time: what JFK might have done if he had not met his end. Ever since I started learning about him, he was one of few presidents that I developed a sense of respect for. He was loved by his people, and I believe that he would have done some great things. JOHN DZIEDZIC, VIA EMAIL

Looking for love in the nerdiest places

Re: 'Let your geek flag fly' (Metro, Nov. 21) I read your article on Eric Smith's book on advice to nerds in the dating world, but I still found myself at crossroads. It seems like there is never EVER enough inspirational words on LGBT nerds in the predominately heterosexual dating world. Nothing against your article or Smith's book, but dating in the LGBT community is not quite the same. Add much more frustration if you're a self-proclaimed nerd who doesn't do bars, clubs or gyms. What advice would you offer to us queer, wallflower dweebs who are looking for love? ADRIAN TORRES SAN MARTIN, VIA EMAIL

Patriots shock Broncos in come-from-behind thriller

NFL. The Patriots beat the Broncos in OT, 34-31, in stunning fashion Sunday night.

Here's what we learned in an epic, 34-31, Patriots overtime victory Sunday night at Gillette Stadium:

1 Unreal in OT
The Patriots and Broncos looked as though they were headed toward a tie but Tony Carter's costly special teams mistake set up an easy Patriots score. With Wes Welker shouting to his Broncos teammates to "get away" from the ball, Carter touched the pigskin and Nate Ebner fell on it to set the Pats up for a chip-shot, 31-yard field goal. Stephen Gostkowski drilled it, giving the Patriots an improbable victory after being down 24-0 at halftime.

2 A frantic fourth
To open the fourth quarter, Logan Ryan stepped in front of Eric Decker and intercepted Peyton Manning. Three plays, 30 yards and 79 seconds later, the Patriots had remarkably taken the lead, 28-24, when Tom Brady hit Julian Edelman on a curl pattern. The Pats receiver turned up field after the reception and dove into the end zone to send the Gillette Stadium crowd into delirium. Manning had a brutal night prior to late in the fourth quarter when he, with a lot of help from Demaryius Thomas, drove the Broncos 80 yards in 4:31 for a tying touchdown that forced overtime.

3 Turnover-fest 2013
The Patriots had as odd a first half as has been seen in the Bill Belichick era as they coughed up the ball three times. The three turnovers directly led to Denver scores, as the Broncos took a stunning 24-0 lead by halftime. Wesley Woodyard blasted Stevan Ridley and the Pats' back fumbled yet again as the ball popped up in the air, was recovered by Vonn Miller and returned 60 yards for a touchdown. On the Patriots' next drive, Brady was strip-sacked by Miller and the Broncos recovered. Two Knowshon Moreno runs later, the Broncos had a 14-0 lead just six minutes and six seconds into the game. LeGarrette Blount added his name to the New England fumble list minutes later as he was whacked by Duke Ihenacho. Denver recovered that Pats blunder as well, leading to a Matt Prater 27-yard field goal.

MATT BURKE

The Patriots exploded for 21 points out of the halftime and Denver couldn't match the Pats' firepower in the third.

- Julian Edelman beat Quentin Jammer on a fade route to complete a quick Pats drive to open the third.
- Dane Fletcher forced a Montee Ball fumble that set up a Brandon Bolden touchdown.
- Tom Brady hit Rob Gronkowski for a 6-yard touchdown pass to pull the Pats to within three heading into the fourth quarter.

Cursed by a Rose

Bulls' Rose set for surgery

Chicago Bulls star guard Derrick Rose will have surgery today on his right knee to repair a torn meniscus. Rose missed the entire 2012-13 season with an ACL injury. The guard could be back as soon as five weeks from now or, if doctors go the conservative route, Rose could miss the next four to six months.

Around the NFL

- Cowboys 24, Giants 21
Tony Romo and the Cowboys finally came through in the fourth quarter, holding off a furious Giants comeback in the second half to move to 6-5 on the season. The Giants' win streak was snapped as they dropped to 4-7. Romo's 13-yard pass to Cole Beasley on third-and-10 allowed Dan Bailey to finish off New York with a 35-yard field goal as time expired.
- Panthers 20, Dolphins 16
Cam Newton continued with his late-game magic Sunday, finding Greg Olsen in the back of the end zone for a 1-yard touchdown pass with 43 seconds left to lift the Panthers to 8-3. The Dolphins, who led 16-6 at halftime, were shutout in the second half by the Carolina defense. The Panthers' game-winning drive almost didn't happen as, with 4:13 remaining, they decided to go for it on fourth down from their own 20-yard line. Newton found Steve Smith for 19 yards and Carolina was back in business.
- Buccaneers 24, Lions 21
The Buccaneers won their third straight game after starting the season 0-8 and in the process sent the Lions into a tailspin prior to their annual Thanksgiving Day home game. Matthew Stafford was picked off in the final minute of Sunday's game, his fourth of the day.
- Chargers 41, Chiefs 38
The Chiefs have dropped back-to-back games after starting the season 9-0 and the 5-6 Chargers are now firmly in the AFC's playoff picture with five weeks to go. Philip Rivers threw for 392 yards and three touchdowns, including a game-winning 26-yard TD strike to Seyi Ajirotutu with 24 seconds left. Kansas City's defense was roughed up in the game physically as Tamba Hali and Justin Houston both left the game with injuries.
- Ravens 19, Jets 3
The Ravens' defense forced three turnovers, picking off Geno Smith twice, and received a huge game from Jacoby Jones to shutdown the reeling Jets. Both teams are now 5-6 on the season. Jones caught for passes from Joe Flacco (273 yards, one touchdown, one interception), for 103 yards. One of the connections was a 66-yard TD strike.

Faverani vital for C's

NBA. The Brazilian big man has earned some spot starts for the Celtics this season.

He goes by "El Hombre Indestructible," and Celtics rookie Vitor Faverani may actually be living up the name. You probably hadn't heard of Faverani until some time after July 2013 — unless, of course, you were a big Valencia Basket of Spain fan.

But there were enough people in the Celtics organization who knew about and wanted the 25-year-old Brazilian center — and they moved fast to sign him to a three-year contract before another NBA team could swoop in. The move appears to be paying off.

Faverani has appeared in all 15 games for the Celtics, starting 10 of them. He's averaging 5.9 points, 5.3 rebounds and 1.3 blocks per game. He can also drain 3-pointers on occasion.

But like most rookies, Faverani has to deal with some inconsistent minutes and inconsistent play.

"I have good games and I play minutes, and some games I don't play minutes," Faverani told Metro Boston. "It's the NBA, it's not easy. I just need to improve more and work hard every day."

He's had an 18-rebound game, a 12-rebound game and a four-block game already in his young career.

On Saturday night in Atlanta, a 94-87 Celtics comeback win, Faverani played some big minutes in the fourth quarter, scoring four points and grabbing two boards in the final frame. He led the C's bench in plus/minus at plus-10 that game as well.

One thing is certain: He belongs in the NBA. He feels he has proven that already.

"Yes, I prove it [every] day in practice," Faverani said. "All days for a long time. Yes, I think I've proved it. I need more every day, but I'm better every day."

It's also early in the season. That's good, because it means Faverani can improve with experience. But the wear and tear of the 82-game season only gets tougher as the months roll by.

"The [biggest] difference is more games," Faverani said when asked to compare the Spanish league with the NBA. "There we play like two games in a week. Here we can play like four or five games back-to-back. That's the difference, the physical difference."

And there's been no time to stargaze out on the court.

"It's one more game," Faverani said. "It's normal, like Tim Duncan … very great player here, like a star, but on the court everybody is the same and fighting."

By the numbers

The Celtics are in Charlotte tonight to face the Bobcats (7, CSN). The last time the C's and 'Cats met, Boston fell by six, 89-83, at TD Garden on Nov. 13.
